

Viessmann makes InstallerLive competition-winner's day

Viessmann has handed over a Vitodens 200-W boiler to Cheltenham-based plumbing and heating engineer, Rupert Burnett. Burnett entered a prize draw on the Viessmann stand at InstallerLive last year and was presented the 35kW, gas-fired condensing domestic boiler with weather compensation controls by Jason Lewis at Plumbase in Cheltenham.

"I never win competitions like this so am over the moon," says Burnett, a former software development engineer. "Now I've just got to decide whether I install this in my own home or with a customer. Other installers rave about Viessmann boilers and are really into them."

Burnett now plans to attend a Viessmann fault-finding and service training course which entitles him to offer a five year warranty on the Vitodens 200-W range of boilers. Viessmann recently announced that its entry-level Vitodens 100-W boiler range come with a five year warranty as standard, covering a rapidly growing proportion of Viessmann products sold in the UK.
